Gender Discrimination in Education

Dr. Manuj Kumar Chutia
Assistant Professor
Deptt. of Education, Nowgong Girls' College

Abstract

Gender is one of the most important factors on the basis of which discrimination made on various aspects. This discrimination or inequality based on sex is the most fundamental feature which has been continuing in every human society around the globe and it is more prominent in developing and underdeveloped countries. In Assam too, such kind of discrimination has been witnessed in all parameters including education. In this paper an attempt is made to focus the gender discrimination in the field of education with particular reference to literacy, enrolment and class 10th examination results in Assam.

Key Words: Gender, Discrimination, Education

Introduction:

In all societies differentiation is a very persistent issue where complete equality in all aspects in fact impossible. The differentiation in human society exists on different issues like age, class, gender, class, caste, economic status, education etc. Inequality based on sex is also one of the most fundamental features which have been continuing in every human society
