Department of History in a nutshell:

The knowledge about our being, our existence and our position, i.e., where we can locate ourselves in the world can be obtained through the study of History, which also gives opportunity to revisit the past and see how the past leaves a footprint on our present. The study of History cannot be confined to the mere reading of dates and facts but history can also be read as text. The environment of the Department is enlivened by the active engagement of the students and teachers in various activities not merely limited to the curriculum. The Department frequently organizes national seminars and lecture programmes foregrounding different aspects of historical learning.
